VITALITY CHECK

A Vitality Check is a biometric assessment that helps identify which areas of your health are strongest and which may need some work, as well as your risk for any potential health problems like diabetes or heart disease. It includes physical measurements and a blood draw to determine one's fasting blood glucose levels, blood pressure, total cholesterol and body mass index (BMI). Some - not all - Vitality Checks also include a cotinine test, which can allow you to earn additional points if you are a non-smoker.

Steps to earning Vitality Points

- 1 You are eligible to earn 125 Vitality Points for each of the four core biometric screenings (BMI, blood pressure, fasting glucose/HbA1c, and total or LDL cholesterol). In addition to the points you can earn for completing a Vitality Check, you can also be awarded for results that fall within a healthy range. You will earn 1,000 points for having a BMI that falls within a healthy range. You will earn 600 points each for submitting a blood pressure, fasting glucose/HbA1c, or total cholesterol/LDL result that falls within a healthy range.
- 2 To earn Vitality Points for a Vitality Check, you may submit one of these forms of supporting documentation:
 - A completed Vitality Check form, including the requested facility information and a doctor's signature.
 - An official copy of your results from the physician or facility that administered your screening. Please note: This document must include

What to Know Before You Go

Labcorp patient service centers do not collect specimens for the COVID-19 swab test, which is used for individuals who have COVID-19 symptoms or meet the testing criteria established by the CDC.

COVID-19 antibody test collections (blood draw) are available through our patient service centers, including Labcorp at Walgreens locations. This type of COVID-19 test is for individuals who think they may have had COVID-19 and do not have symptoms. Note: antibody testing should not be used as the sole basis to diagnose or exclude infection. Learn More
